

Traveling through Europe?

A Guide from the Nordics to the Mediterranean

While being in the heart of Europe you might think: hey, Europe at my fingertip no matter where I go? Almost! Luckily Salzburg is only 2- and 2.5-hour train rides away from Munich and Vienna. One of the main airport hubs in Europe that will get you anywhere.

Here are some useful links that will let you book travel easier – or find out travel destinations from certain cities:

Taking the train from Salzburg to Munich or Vienna is fairly easy, with something called the “Westbahn” – it’s a privately owned railway service that offers competitive rates compared to other national railway associations.

<https://westbahn.at/en/>

If you decide to travel further what westbahn offers, I highly recommend traveling first class in the OEBB trains in Austria called railjet. They are like bullet-train style kind of trains and will bring you very fast to your destination

Direct flights from Vienna to elsewhere:

<https://www.flightconnections.com/flights-from-vienna-vie>

Direct flights from Munich to elsewhere:

<https://www.flightconnections.com/flights-from-munich-muc>

While Italy is always a focus point, I do recommend looking at Barcelona or Lisbon in the Mediterranean or go north! Scandinavia, while being pricy, has incredible landscapes to offer and a very different part of Europe as you would expect it.